Regulating innovation in the financial system to power a resilient recovery:

Squaring the circle between regulation, finance, innovation, and sustainability

The Covid pandemic has been a turning point for humanity. It brought the world to a standstill and highlighted the challenges we all face as members of the same species inhabiting the same small and vulnerable planet. The recovery offers the opportunity to address such challenges but requires a joint effort between public and private sectors, and shared commitment to the green and digital transitions, enhancing societal progress at the same time.

Finance has a pivotal role to play gaining from the pace and breath of innovation in the sector. Both digital finance and sustainable finance (ESG) have been exponential, although mostly unrelated, trends over the last years providing new solutions to foster greater sustainability from digital payments, crowdfunding, digital public procurement, all the way to green fintech. Regulators as well have a vital role in creating an enabling regulatory framework for finance to deliver for the real economy, people and the planet without forfeiting its supervisory duties for investors protection and market stability. Squaring the circle between regulation, finance, innovation and sustainability is critical.

The aim of this conference is to explore in greater depth the new role that financial regulators can play in putting finance as an engine of a sustainable recovery, and transition. It will bring together experts from across public and private sectors to share some of the most inspiring experiences and strategies. The outcomes of the webinar will be crystallised in a publication to provide inputs for the G20 Finance Ministers and Bank Governors who have recognized financial inclusion and finance sustainable as priorities of G20.

G20 STREAM: DIGITAL FINANCIAL INCLUSION

Sustainable and inclusive finance and digital innovation are strongly intertwined and provide the ground for entirely new forms of regulation and supervision of financial market.

Regulatory and supervisory financial authorities are reshaping their approach in order to incorporate the lessons learnt during the pandemic and to foster the transition to digital innovation. In so doing, they need to take greater role as trustworthy reference point for society to enable the growth of a sustainable and inclusive finance.

The objective of this conference is thus in line with the Priorities for the G20 FIAP: Digital Financial Inclusion, established by GPF.
